

Justin Lubke grew up in a tiny Montana town. After leaving home, he did social work in the slums of Rio de Janeiro and made his first film with an indigenous tribe in south India. Eventually, Justin returned to the US and earned an honors degree in filmmaking. For ten years, Justin has worked in non-fiction and fiction film as a director, cinematographer and editor. His work has been featured on major networks such as National Geographic, NBC and PBS. Justin's feature documentary, Class C won two Emmy awards. He recently finished shooting Not Yet Begun to Fight about America's wounded warriors, which is winning film festival awards nation-wide. His most recent commercial work includes TV and web campaigns for such clients as The Hartford, Wells Fargo, Purina and Google. Justin also enjoys creating media for non-profit organizations that he believes are doing valuable work here and abroad.